Campus Faces Retouch Job

SPECIAL LANDSCAPING of the main campus of Presbyterian College is planned for the near future under the direction of Hugh Harris, landscape architect and planning consultant of Greensboro, N. C.

Plans will take into consideration the long-range program for future expansion of the campus.

The architect's work initially is to cover 37 acres of the main campus, designed that it may be readily unified with the remaining 18 acres now owned and with future acquired properties in the ultimate campus plan.

Harris already has under study a topographical survey of the area and campus sketches showing tree and sidewalk locations. He will direct his attention upon these 11 phases in his landscape project: grading and drainage, soil, grass, trees, shrubs, courts, play fields, drives and parking areas, walks, enclosures and special features.

The campus plan which Presbyterian College has followed in its building program was designed by New York Architect Charles W. Leavitt in 1912 during the administration of President Davison McDowell Douglas. Proposed work will be conducted within the scope of this plan, with the aim of improving and preserving the general campus appearance.

Nearly one-half of its goal means . . .

The Living Endowment Begins to 'Live'

THE 1959 LIVING ENDOWMENT has hit almost one-half of its minimum $20,000 goal.

Latest figures on Presbyterian College's annual giving program show $9,833.82 contributed by 342 donors during the past four months. This amount represents annual interest on $196,676 (invested at 5 percent), thus creating an effective Living Endowment and emphasizing the importance of the program built around smaller gifts.

Contributions to date have averaged $28.75 per gift, but almost two-thirds of these have been for $10 or under. Here's the range: Under $5—50 donors; $5 to $9—66 donors; $10 to $19—96 donors; $20 to $29—63 donors; $30 to $49—9 donors; $50 to $74—22 donors; $75 to $99—2 donors; $100 to $149—27 donors; $150 to $249—2 donors; $250 and over —6 donors.

Alumni and friends join in support of this program. In addition to general mailings to all alumni, personal solicitations are being conducted in various counties of South Carolina. And 31 class agents already are in the midst of sending special letters to their classmates.

These class agents include:

1915—J. F. Winter of Florence, S. C.; 1916—Dr. Robert S. Woodson of Charlotte; 1919—Rev. E. L. Barber of Raleigh; 1921—Hugh L. Eichelberger; 1923—Dr. W. D. Hall of Roanoke Rapids, N. Note to High School Seniors

Scholarships Open For 1960-61 Session

THE PROGRAM of academic scholarships—with some grants ranging to $2,000 each—is announced for the 1960-61 session at Presbyterian College.

High school seniors of superior intellectual achievement are urged to start making their plans now to avail themselves of this opportunity for financial assistance toward obtaining a college education.

Ten Founder's Scholarships highlight the program. These grants are made annually on a competitive basis from among scores of applicants. The deadline for applying for this type of aid is December 10, 1959. Founder's grants cover four years of study and offer each recipient from $200 to $500 per year, or a maximum of $2,000 for the top contestants. Awards are made on the basis of intellect, leadership and character.

Twenty-four students currently are assisting with their education at Presbyterian College under the Founder's Scholarship program.

On the '59 Football Scene

'If only the first team could play all the way'

A WELL-BALANCED first team will carry Presbyterian College football colors into action this year. But there are problems of depth at certain key positions.

That was the general assessment as 54 candidates swung full-stride into practice on September 1 to prepare for one of the country's earliest college openers just 11 days later. East Carolina invades Clinton with a veteran squad on September 12 to launch PC's nine-game schedule.

Coach Frank Jones will stick with the winged-T offense he unveiled as a surprise last year. It netted him 6 wins, 3 losses and 1 tie and the Little Three championship. He expects the campaigning to be rougher this year, with the Blue Hose a prime target for all opponents. Two new coaches are on deck to help Jones and his top assistant, Clyde Ehrhardt, molder of the highly rated PC line defense. They are: End Coach Vic Spooner, who came in last spring as track coach; and Backfield Coach Merlyn Veren, most recent addition who'll double as head basketball mentor.

Coach Jones may be expected to open up his versatile winged-T attack even more than that which provided such colorful action in '58. He has accurate passers and a running game that should be faster than last year.

Quarterback no longer poses the problem which had become an annual refrain. Bob Waters heads a talented crew. The team's top runners of the past fall are back—Halfback Bobby Pate and Fullback Bill Hill—and they'll be aided by Halfback Dave Morgan at the other half. Halfback depth, however, appears skimpy.

The Blue Hose forward wall shapes up as sturdy on the inside, shakey on the outside. That is, the guards are loaded and center, well-manned; but tackles and ends greatly need more reserve power.

First-Stringers Don Bridges and Billy Ogden are pushed to hold their positions by other capable guard candidates. And rugged Mac Copeland is well assisted as he readies for his third season at center. Bill Schofill and Cecil Morris at tackles and Wilson Vastine at one end are fine performers, but here the well of adequate reserves begins to run dry.

So the promise of the new season depends upon

Valedictory Scholarships offer another type of grant, each amounting to $1,000 for the four years of study. They are available to first-honor graduates of accredited high schools, upon recommendation of the high school principal. Certain second-honor graduates also may become eligible upon special consideration.

Ministerial Scholarships, each amounting to $1,000 for the four years of study, are available to ministerial candidates of Protestant faith. To be eligible a student must have declared to his local church his intention to enter this field.

Other types of financial assistance offered qualified students by Presbyterian College are grantsin-aid, which provide work opportunities, and various loan funds.

High school seniors may obtain further information about the scholarship program from their principals, Presbyterian ministers or from the director of admissions at PC.

Need a Church Program?

FOR THE THIRD straight year evangelistic teams of Presbyterian College ministerial students will provide programs for religious services in Presbyterian churches of Georgia and South Carolina.

These groups have made almost 100 appearances before congregations in the past two years. They hope to expand this service even further during the 1959-60 session, starting in mid-September. Programs have ranged from morning services, to men's meetings, to young people's assemblies and evening worship.

Ministers of the two synods are urged to call upon these evangelistic teams for programs. Sponsored by the Presbyterian College Ministerial Club, they have special appeal for young people. Arrangements for scheduling appearances of the teams may be made through Dr. T. Layton Fraser or Dr. Joseph M. Gettys, professors of Bible at PC.

how well the first unit can remain intact for steady play and to what extent reserves can be brought along to assist.

Here's the 1959 PC schedule:

September 12—East Carolina at Clinton; 19—at Furman; 26—at Davidson; October 3—Wofford at Clinton (Homecoming); 17—at Elon; 24—at Tampa; 31—Catawba at Clinton (Parents Day); November 7—at Citadel; 14—at Appalachian; 26—at Newberry.

The names of these institutions are listed below. If you are employed by any of these firms, mail your check today to the Presbyterian College Living Endowment, along with the "matching corporate alumnus" form available at your company personnel or public relations office. The amount of the gift you send will be matched by your company—up to a stipulated maximum—and PC will receive double benefit for the money you give.

PC's 79th Begins on September 14

A NOTHER capacity enrollment of students will enter Presbyterian College with the start of the 79th session on September 14.

The College once more maintained a waiting list toward the close of the summer, despite tightening academic standards for entrance. And although dormitory spaces have been filled for some time, the exact total of the 1959 registration is not definite because of the day-student factor.

Freshmen are scheduled to arrive for a three-day orientation period on September 14. Upperclassmen will follow on September 17, and classwork will get underway two days later.

Fall Features: Homecoming, Parents Day

TWO PROGRAMS for alumni and parents highlight the fall schedule at Presbyterian College.

Alumni will return to the campus for Homecoming on Saturday, October 3, 1959. They'll find the usual festivities, a PC-Wofford football game and these special class reunions: 1908, 1909, 1918, 1919, 1924, 1928, 1929, 1933, 1934, 1938, 1939, 1943, 1944, 1948, 1949, 1953, 1954, 1958 and 1959.

Then on October 31, Presbyterian College will entertain parents of its 79th student body at the College's third annual Parents Day.

Alumni Named To Seminary Faculty

TWO YOUNG Presbyterian College graduates have recently been appointed to the faculty of Columbia Theological Seminary

They are: Rev. David Moorefield '48 of Lancaster. S. C., instructor in the department of systematic theology; and Rev. Neely McCarter '50 of Gastonia. N. C., associate professor of Christian education.

Moorefield, after experience in the Army chaplaincy, has been completing his doctoral studies at Duke University. McCarter will assume his duties in the fall of 1961, after studies at Yale University toward his PhD.

Church Gifts Stand at 26.7 Percent

THE SYNODS of Georgia and South Carolina designated $112,000 for Presbyterian College in their 1959 budgets, but only 26.7 percent of this amount had been received by PC at the close of the first six months.

That's the report from the College business office, which broke down the mid-year summary in South Carolina-$20,434 given toward its $80,000 budget for PC, representing 25.5 percent of the total. Georgia—$9,664.47 in receipts as of July 1 for 30.2 percent of its $32,000 support.

Presbyterian College derives approximately 21.5 percent of its general educational income from the two synod budgets annually. These gifts have be-come an important part of the College's forward strides, and continued efficient operation depends

Presbyterian College Serves the Church
